Louisville, Ky., July 3.-With the full returns from twenty five missing in the state wide Democratic primary held Saburday, there are two races which are still in doubt. These missing counties are practically all in the Tenth and Eleventh congressional districts. The races for lieutenant governor and state auditor are close contests From reports neceived by the Courier-Journal in the lieutenant governor's race James P. Edwards leads E. J. McDermett 141 votes. These same returns show Ruby Laffoon the missing counties indicate that MoDermott may overcome Edwards'

Telephonic communication could not be had with most of them, while with others the vote in Saturday's primary had not been counted. The Member of District Board, Taylor case with Union county, which had not tabulated the state vote, was that a primary for county offices was also held Saturday. The same trouble existed in Hardin county.

The counties missed by congressioual districts are as follows: First district, Carlisle; Second district, Uniou; Ninth district, Boyd, Lewis, Rowan; Tanth district, Elliot, Estill, Floyd, Johnson, Knott, Martin, Magelfin, Menefee, Pike, Powell and Wolfe; Eleventh district, Casey, Clay, Jackson, Leslie, Monroe, Owsley, Perry, Wayne and Whitley.

McCreary's majority in the race for the nomination for governor, will reach 30,000. Garnett has won over O.II.Pollard for actorney general with about the same figures; diamlett for Superintendent of Public Instruction, will have about 25,000 plurality over Litterall and Eubank; J. W. Newman made a runaway racy for commissioner of agriculturo, his plurality probably being larger than that of 'Mc-Creary for governor.

TOBACCO CROP WILL BE SHORT

Soldiers Reunion in Centertown today About Fifteen Per Cent Decrease is Expected.

Condition in Cigar Leaf Sections Are Brighter---Reports From All Over the Country.!

Frankfort, Ky., July 3.-That therewill be no new record made by the tobacco crop of the United States in Mr. and Mrs. John King, B-aver 1911 is a fact clearly indicated by a thorough canvass just completed in all the important tobacco-producing sections of the country. In many ed a nice bunch of squirrels last localities the farmers, after having had a somewhat prolong d period of advancing prices, have become dissatisfied with a slight slump in the James Martin, John Austin and market and this has had a tendency to curtall the acreage to a certain extent. The hot, dry weather of the month of May was unfavorable for beds and the baked condition of the soll prevented favorable planting everywhere. The very lateness of the season iu many localities renders it a little more difficult than ordinarily to secure accurate data as to the acreage planted in tobacco this year. In the large producing sections such as Kentucky, North Carolina, Virginia, Ohio, Teunessee, Wisconsin and Connecticut, a careful canvas has been made, and the total apparent acreage in all actions in 1911 amounts to 953,658

Computatious based on the average yield per acre for the past 10 years in the various states named Indicate a total tobacco yield in the United States this year of 786,410,-435 pounds. The harvested acreage In 1910 was estimated at 1,149,831 acres, with n yield of 931,068,695 in the Ohio valley the crop is from two to three weeks late and a great deal depends upon the kind of growing weather from this date on. In the blue grass section Kentucky fear of early frosts is already causing some alarm, though of course this is a little premature. In Wisconsin conditions are reported as the most favorable in many years. The crop is all transplant-Rrpublican State Convention and ed and the plants reported in a thriving condition. The acreage is above that of last year, and the outlook seems good.

The apparent area planted to tobacco in Kentucky, the greatest tobacco-producing section in the country, or for that matter in the world. amounts to 282,751 acres. The average yield per acre in Kentucky under present conditions is not far from 850 pounds. On this basis the 1911 acreage should yield approximately 240,338,350 pounds of tobacco. The estimate last fall for the 1910 crop showed a hapvested area in Kentucky amounting to 375,908 acreas, yielding 197,652,000 pounds of burley, and 139,-283,400 pounds of dark, a total of 336,935,400 pounds of tobacco.

JUDGE O'REAR'S GREAT SPEECH

Mobs and Mob Rule Dissected and Remedies Suggested.

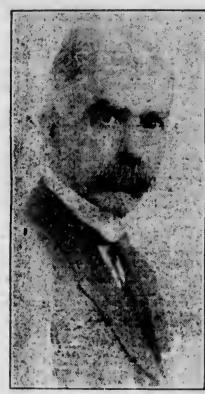

Rule of the People Must Be Restored by Utter Overthrow of Legislative Lobby.

The following speech was delivered by Judge Ed C. O'Rear, at Princeton, Ky., on Friday, June 16, 19ti, to an immense audience composed of representatives of all political parties, who listened with the greatest of intarest throughout its delivery: Fellow Kentuckians:

I come to a community more than once recently stricken by the mob spirit, yet a community which is fully an average, if not more than an average, of the educated, law-abiding, quiet citizens of our state. The animus of your mobs was of a kind which has been given most notoriety in Kentucky during the last three or four years, popularly designated as nightriding. I come before you to discuss, as one of the incidents injected into this campaign, this matter of moh spirit, which affects our society, which has been, to the dishonor of our state, used by some of her own press and sons to disparage her in the eyes of the world, and in her own esteem.

I do not come to defend the mob. por to excuse it, but to study it, to endeavor to explain it, in the hope that when the subject is properly understood von, and the other people of this state, may take such steps as may be necessary to yest such power in proper officials of this government as to prevent its recurrence.

If there is a mob it may be necessary to shoot it, or hang it, but it is Infinitely better not to have the mob at all. If, therefore, without mitigating the punishment due the mob in esse, I venture to suggest the suppression of the mob in posse, I hope there will be none so stupid as to think I favor mob law.

Kentucky has been held up by some of the press, and othera, as peculiarly subject to niob law. She has developed her full share, but it is not true that the mob spirit is more prevaient hero than in the country generally. Brigands, and the criminal spirit which lives by fawlessness. are alien to our state. The people here, with rare individual exceptions. live cheerfully under the law, taught from their infancy to look to it for redress of wrongs. It is only when they have been led to believe that the law is inadequate, or those charged with its execution are faithless, that the temper of any considerable number of the public la excited to take the law into their own handa for execution.

And that is generally true throughout the civilised world, and has been for a long time.

Nobs are not the growth of modern eivification. They are not peculiar to Amarica, nor to any section of it. The oppressive com laws of Great Britain produced mobs. The cruei exactions of the House of Borubou in France produced mobs, and the grievances were so great and so numerous that the moh became a rebeilion. The oppressions of the British government gave rise to mobs in the colonies before the revolution.

Remove Cause of Mob.

That the moh ahould be suppressed promptly and effectivally, goes without saying. There can be no ground for debate on that question. But that the action of the government should stop there, is to commit the public conscience to indeffirnce to the pub-He welfare. It is high time in such senditions to look to their cause, and If the cause he found to lie in oppreseton, or injustice, or inefficient cution of the law, then the remedy in to cure the esuae, not an a consession to the meb, but to mainbe peace in the future.

We have had in Kentucky, unfor tunately, and to our discredit, a num-per of mobe furing the tast half contury, but no more, I think, than the average state of the Union. The moh of the past may be divided into three general classes: One, where some revoiting crime has been committed, exciting and shocking public sentiment so that a great many are excited beyond ordinary restraint, resulting in the wresking of vengeance upon the supposed gullty person; another, arising from industrial conditions: following upon strikes and lockouts, and the third is not wholly unlike the second, is similar in the sense of oppression practiced or suffered by a great number of the public.

To the latter class helong the nightridors and other related disorders, which, by the way, have not been confined in their operations to Kentucky. Among this class in Kentucky was the toilgate raiding; people were killed, more property destroyed by the raiders than was done in the time of the night-rider troubles.

In reference to the tollgate raids, then the public believed that it was not a sound policy to give a monopoly of the highways of the state, which were turnpikes, to corporate and individual owners, who could exact toll from every other traveler; they helieved that it was better for the puhlie to own and operate the public highways.

Toligate Night-Riders.

After many years of discussion laws were finally enacted empowering the countles to acquire the roads. The owners of the property and the county authorities were in many instances unable to agree upon prices for the property, and the impression was created that the owners were attempting to indefinitely delay the matter of public ownership, or to get exorbitant prices for the property. There were some then, impatient at the delays and dickering, who cut up the gates, terrorized and in some instances beat the owners, and when resisted killed gatekeepers and owners.

As we now look eaimly back upon that dark chapter of history, we full to find an excuse for these outrages. Broops and deputy shcriffs were called out to protect the properly, which was undoubtedly right. But the publie peace was quickest restored by the speedy acquirement of the reads hy the counties.

These roads were not acquired in deference to the mob spirit, nor as the result of ita actions. They were acquirod as a resuit ob a deliberate purpose, framed in public opinion, created by years of previous discussion. if conditions had been such that the counties and owners of the roads could have agreed more promptly, or legislative acts to authorize the acquisition of these roads had heen more promptly passed in compliance with the overwholming public demand, there is no reason to suppose that the mob would have had cause, even in its own misguided judgment, to have destroyed the property. Toligates had existed upon the turnpikes in Kentucky for the better part of a century without moiestation. Years of discussion had gradually ripened public opinion into the belief that the #### system was inhorently faulty. Law's Delay Cause of Violence.

After the matter had linaily been enacted into law giving counties the right to purchase these roads, it nppeared perhaps to the more thoughtless that the law was inadequate towards giving rollef. The county offlcials in many instances were unreaaonable in their demands upon the owners of the roads, or the owners were unreasonable in their demands upon the counties, so that it was made to appear to the more impatient that the law which had been enacted was faulty. The more radical spirits in the community saw in the situation a defiance of the public will. Then it was that they began their depredations. That was the last uprising of this class in Kentucky until the nightrlder troubles in 1907. I have already described in a previous address delivered at Hopkinsville, Ky., on the first day of May, the conditions existing in this state for many years prior to that date, affect ing the interests of the tohacco growers. Without repeating here minutely these conditions I deem it sufficient to remind you that the culture of tobacco had been one of the principal industries in this state since its separation from Virginia, and of their fathers before them for all of the genera flons from Jamestown to Independence. They had found in the cultivation of this crop the means hy which they supplied the most of their commerciai needs. It was the basis of their currency, a large part of the lo- commerce, it defied it. cal tax with which they defrayed tho expenses of the colony, the tithes of the ministers in the established church, and the revenues with which they paid the soldiers of the line in #### the Revolutionary war.

Trust Eliminated Competition. Perhaps 80,000 men were engaged in this industry alone in Kentucky in 1907. The value of the yield was not less than $35,000,000 or $40,000,000 a year. In the meantime there had been evolved in the experience, daring and sagacity of financiers and manufacturers a series of eembinations of wealth and factories, resulting finally in the concentration of many huyera into few. The compe tition which had theretofore existewaa thus eliminated. This applied not alone to tohacco, but to many other commodities as well. The subjact attracted the sharp and critical attention of the public. Magazinea, newspapera and speakers warned the public of the dangers imminant from this new system, and sought to contrive means to frustrate its oppressive effect. Legislation more or less drastic was attempted and enacted. As early as 1888 statutes were passed by the various states of the Union and by the congress of the United States, highly penalizing combinations made in restraint of trade. Kentucky in 1890 passed a similar statute, sovere and stringent, and affording no exception.

In 1891 the people of Kentucky adopted a new constitution. It was provided in your organic law that the legislainre should enact such statutes ed. as would prevent confederations and prises which would raise the price of value. After that the legislature onacted no stainte on the subject until Producars Received Little.

Prosecutions hegun under the statute of 1890 were contested on the ground that the statutes had been repealed by the constitution. The courts held to the contrary. Still, thera were no convictions, and hut few prosesutions undertaken so far as we know. The effect of the combinations continued to increase. The result was that the producers of tobacco in Kentucky found their market restricted to practically a single huyer, who set the price, graded the crops and took its time for accepting and paying for crops delivered; partitioning the territory of the state among its representatives and ailies, as a sovereign would parcel out his favors among his courtiers. The world was demanding and using all the tohacco that was being raised and was naving for it at the prices demanded by the single manufacturer and its alifes. The producers were being paid in most instances but lit-tle more than the cost of production. When it was considered that the fertility of the soil was being exhausted by raising tobacco crops, in a great many instances the producers were paid even less than the cost of production.

Tobacco is a crop which, from its nature, requires personal handling and care. But little machinery can be utilized in its culture and preparation for the market. Consequently one man can handle hut few acres. The tobacco raiser became generally a poor man. He and his family devoto their labor for a whole year to the crop, frequently resulting in his receiving less than 75 cents a day for his toil.

Trust Resped Profits.

It was finally disclosed that this single huyer and its allies had resped and contentment. and was reaping the most enormous profits from this class of business. The difference between the buying price and the selling price was so extensive that as much as 60 per cent per annum was realized upon the capital of the trust, magnified by fictitious means to four times its reas value. In other words, the trust realized 240 per cent upon its actual investments in the business.

The growers, finding that the statutes against the trusts apparently were inoffective, undertook to apply the same methods which the trust had employed. Legislation was enance of the public good, allowing farmera to pool their crops and prod ucts, ao as to present a more united and organized body of seilers against the united and organized hody of buyers, and ao as to realizo a more nearly reasonable value for the com modity. The trust buyers at this point declined to buy from the growers' association, and in every way conceivable in the art of cunning, experienced and apparently conscience iess men, backed by hundreds of milflona of dollars made from the product of these people, sought to break down the organizations of the pro-

You will observe that these conditions had been oxisting for a full generation. After conalderable agitation in the public press and upon the sentiment was sufficiently stump, aroused to procure the ensctment of iegislation granting to the growers the privilego their competitor had been enjoying undisturbed for so iong. Then the growers were met with the concerted, combined, deliberate and ruthiess methods of their competitor, in which the latter undertook to and proclaimed that it would destroy the growers' organization and would not buy their product. Thus the first assault was made by the tohacco truat, the buyer. Itself an unlawful organization, fattening by unlawful means upon the sweat. poverty and hardship of those whose labor produced the subject of the Growers Formad Pools. In 1906 the growers formed pools in Kentucky, as well as in other states growing the crop, in which they attempted to gather into assoelations of their own, the principal supply of their crops. These who did not join, finding an improved market, took advantage of the situation to sell at increased prices. The trust refused to buy at all from the growers' associations, on the ground that they had combined. Not daunted, the growers again pooled their crop of 1907. Again these who were not willing to shara the risks and enterprise of their neighbors held aloof. and supplied, as far as their eropa would go, the needs of the trust in the midst of this situation there occurred the memorable paule of 1907. Aiready two brops were tied up in the pools. The growers needed the proceeds from their crops to discharge debts. Thair creditors, the merchants, the banks, were pressing for the payment of their dehts. The merchants were being pressed by the wholesalers under the effect of the prevating panic. The aituation had become acute in Kentucky. Neighbor was arrayed against neighbor in argument as to the utility and propriety of the growers'associations. The trust was encouraging, with its money, agents and arguments, these disputes, its purpose being to destroy the unity of the growers. Nothing was done in the meantime by the government of the state to relieve the situation. Nothing was attempt-The dispute became more acrimonious and continued to grow more combinations of capital and enter- bitter. A quarrel over a dog fight has been known to produce a feud runcommodities above their reasonshie ning through many years. How much more, then, was it likely that so serious a cause of quarrel among men as this quarrel between tobacco trust and the growers should result in had feeling an danger, and finally in acts of violence? This situation, already hig with anger and had feeling, burst into acts of unlawful violence.

The question then arose-what to do with the situation, That the men who had destroyed property and life should be punished, the sober-minded judgment of most people agreed, and heartliy agreed, as doubtless you did. That further outbreaks should he prevented as far as lay within the power of the officers of the law, was equally imperative. Life and property and the peace of the community must be preserved at all hszards. Still, there existed the cause of this trouble.

Kentuckisna Not Lawless.

It is not true that the Kentuckiana are a lawless people. It is especially not true that the farming class of the state are lawless in their purposes and instincts. They are of the contrary disposition. It must be apparent then that when a quiet, orderly, easygoing people, such as these, are so wrought up in their feelings that a considerable number of them give way to their passions and impulse of violence, that there must be a dccpeated and long-endured aggravation.

I then held to the opinion, and do yet, that it was not only the province, but the duty of the state government to, as far as it lay lawfully in its power, remove the cause, to the end that the public peace might be preserved in the future, that our citizens might be spared the fate of becoming felons; that property might he saved from destruction; and that upon the restoration of normal conditions the great hulk of the people engaged in the business of tobacco growing might pursue it with profit

Was such an idea entertained on my part a lawless iden? Did it in the least squint at or counive with lawlessness? Did it in the least importune the violent to continue their vioience? Is it not always the legitimate end of government and a wisc purpose of those entrusted with it to produce these conditions which will give the greatest contontment and prosperity? I dld then say in a public decisration which I made on an occasion which has become memorable in the history of the state, just how that remedy was to be applied, and 1 am happy to say to you now that I am conacted in Kentucky, under the impulse firmed by the host of judicial and offiof the public demand and in further cial authority in this whole land, that there was enough force and newer and virtue in the law to cone with the situation, i declared then and 1 new reneat, that in the law, and under the law, there was ampic and just correction of existing evils.

Upheid by Supreme Court,

Since I last spoke to the public on this subject the supreme court of the United States has found judicially that the tobacco trust was of tiself a lawiess combination, and has been throughout all these years of its oppression; that its purpose was to restrict trade in tobacco unreasonably, and that therefore it should be disbanded as an outlaw. And it was clearly within the law that the tohaeco trust should be outlawed in Keutucky, because it was in truth and in fact an outlaw, and that it should not only have been fined but until it ceased its oppressive methods it should be denied access to Kentucky at ali: that it should be re quired to deal fairly and squarely with the tobacco growers of Kentucky, or it should be required to remove its presence from the state so long as it continued the aggravating cause of violence and disorder.

The courts of Kentucky have con sistently held that the farmers' pool was a lawful enterprise; that it did not violate the constitution of this state or of the United States; that it was founded on the experience of munkind, authorized by the acts of the lagialsture of Kentucky, and justified hy the press and pupit and public opinion. But the courts of Kentucky went further, preceding by some three years the now epoch-making opinior delivered the other day by Chief Jun tice White, and declared that comhinations which were not unreasonable restraints of trade were not unlawful in Kentucky, either under the statutes of Kentucky or of the United States, and the courts of Kentuaky declared that combinations of the huvers had equal rights with the combinations of the seiters, also that compinations of the seliers had equal rights with the huyera.

it feit to my lot to pea one of tha opinions of the court of appeals of Kentucky declaring in emphatic ianguage the principle which I have just announced, and which I am happy to and is sustained by the last conclusions of the supreme court of the United States upon this subject.

Favore Law Enforcement. When I said then, and when I say now, that the purpose and end of government is to enforce the laws aqually and impartially against the violent, lawiesa night-riders, and enforce them also sgainst the lawiess though not violent trust, was that equivolent to saying that I favor lawiessness? And when I deciared that it was the province of government and its duty to remove the aggravating cause which provoked outbursta of violence in valions sections of the state, at the same time saying that the specific acts of violence should he punished, because they were unlawful, was this justification of iawiessness in any sense? But passing this, I will now ask your indulgence for a moment to speak as to my personal and individual record upon the queation of mobs. As a public official, acting as commonwealth attorney, specially appointed for the purpose, I prosecuted that, it so bappened, in a Republican county in the state. I prosecuted them to the end of the law. Later I became a public official hy election, heing chosen to the office of county judge of my county. The night before my induction into the office a mob took from the county jail a prisoner and hung him until he was dead.

First Official Act.

My first official act was to convene the fiscal court in special session, and cause rewards to he offered for the apprehension of the members of the mob and for their prosecution. A number of men were arrested as the result of this effort and were hrought hefore me for examination. They were in every instance held to the grand jury without bail and were indicted and tried. There I exhausted every means in my power to punish the members of the mob.

Since being a memher of the court of appeals, the question arose in a case before the court as to the effect of a mob of which I have been especially treating today, to-wit: the tollgate raiders. A band of these marauders had destroyed tollhouses and terrorized the keepers.

The road had to be abandoned hy the owners. Then the county condemned it under the atatutes. Tho question presented was the fair market value of the road as of the date of the condemnation. The county insisted that the value was as it was found to be after the mob had depreciated that value by its destruction of the company's property. The jury found accordingly. The court of appeals reversed the judgment on the grounds that the verdict was inadequate, and rested on erroneous hasis; that the moh was a hand of felons, in law, whom it was the duty of the county to disperse, and to protect the property from; that the public would not he allowed to profit by the mob's lawless acts, but should pay for the road which it required as if the mob had not existed. In short. that the law would profect to the last extremity owners of the property not only from the direct act of the moh. but from the indirect results. The opinion may be found reported in 117 me to write that opinion of the court.

Thua you will see that in three inarated, have I shown by my officia! action and conduct, which fortunately are matters of public record, my es teom and my manner of dealing with the specific acts of mobs. I went so far as the law empowered me; I went no further because I had not the power.

Believe in Square Deat.

1 believe the average man is satisfied with a aquare deal. His idea is. that is the end and purpose of all law. And he is not far wrong. When the law fails him, there is, in his mind, but two courses: either to "grin and bear it, or kick." When a great number having a similar grievance find that they are not getting a equare deal, or helieve they are not. which affects their actions the same, they kick aimultaneously. If not enough of them to make a revolution they make a mob. I believe that. broadly speaking the mob apirit as it is called, rarely evinces itself except under the helief that the law is inadquate to redress the wrong, a heitef most always slowly formed, however swiftly executed. Not only that the law is inadequate, so far as the statutes and officials are concerned inadequate in that the public, through any legai channel available to them. can not act.

The hest-governed people are selfgoverned people. Likewise they are the best eatisfied with their government. if it is pliable enough to re apond promptly to the public will. there would be no ground for hupatience at it.

Legislatura Not Representative.

The hellef has been alowly growing in this country that the legislatures, the people's only means of enacting their will into law, are not truly representatve of the people; that they are aubject to corrupting influences too frequently; that through inatten tion, or ignorance, or baseness, they suffer the public's interesta to he subverted to that of a favored class, who would chiain through the law more than they ln good couscience and under a square deal were entitled to. This belief is manifested in a number of ways. One, the tone of the press, and public atterancea on the subject; another, in the restrictions placed upon legislatures in late years by the constitution, prohibiting the granting of special favors in legisiation. This apecial legislation has been cut out, hut the interests which would profit nevertheless by euloving immunity which the public is not ailowed, obtain their ands hy defeating legislation which would correct the evil practices. They do this in the main through the influence of the iohhy—a set of astute, polite and corrupting agenta employed especially to defeat legislation of a mature which is aimed to protect the public from those who would fatten upon it through unrighteous and excaptional privileges. The people have for years discussed and tried to remedy this evil in government. It has, however, grown constantly worse. Many think there is no lawful remedy.

The remedy is not alone to hang a moh-back of that, and in order that there should be no mob, and no provocation of one, the first wrong cause should be removed. Disband the johhy. Prevent its harmful influence. Restora to the people their legislature untrammeled by the obstructions members of a mob in Kentucky, and of those who would make it as unrepresentative body; let the people understand that in that body, established as a means of expressing the public weal for the public good and government, is safely vested the lawmaking power. Thus let them see that they may in confidence then rest the matter of all remedial action in providing means to conserve the public welfare and peace and safety.

Sora Disappointment.

I affirm that the legislature of Kentucky has for 20 years and more heen a sora disappointment, in the main, to the public. There have been notable inatances of high-minded and patriotic members in that body during that time. But the dominant influence has been pernicious; It has obstructed wholesome, remedial leg-Islation; it has foiled the public demand: it has thwarted the public purpose; it has grown to be called a reproach to the state. Thus has been formed, slowly hut gradually, the opinion in the public mind, that the lawmaking hody was inadequate to grant means of redress of public oppression. The opinion has grown iato Indignation and deep distrust. There has consequently grown a coatempt for law and a denial of its efficiency. The remedy of violence is wrongis unjustifiable. The true remedy is to remove the controlling cause. As the doctors now say, "Swat the fly that spreads the disease." It is hetter than to have to treat the disease when it becomes an eruption.

Should Have Power to Recall.

If legislation aimed against the lobby is not sufficient, then let the people take into their own hands, whence all power of government originates, the making of laws which their legislature will not enact, and the repealing and vetoing of laws which it does enact contrary to the public will and good. Then let tham add the power of recalling faithless, inefficient, negligent or corrupt public officials who fall in the proper discharge of thier official duties. Then let them hy direct popular action, conducted under a goneral law and hy public officials, select the nominees for public offices, in a statewide Kentucky Reports, 674, and it fell to primary, held on the same day hy the same officers, for all parties, bailots, hootha and officers heing furnished stances in my official life, covering a at the public expense. Then let them period of more than 20 years, and elect United States senators by direct occurring at intervals widely sep- popular vote. Then add a corrupt practices act that will prevent corruption in elections, by preventing the gathering up or using of big campaign funds; make all candidates and party managera publish hefore and after elections, primary and atate, completa and verified accounts of sitreceipts and expenditures, showing from whom received, how much from each and how expended. The amount should be limited to actual, necessary and proper expenses of advertising, speaking, traveling, postage, clerks, and the like. If our public officials are elected by bribery and corruption of the voters; if when elected they are aubjected to the influece of a corruptng lobby; if the means of corruption are furnished by special interests which are enjoying immunities and unjust privileges from the pubile, how can you expect the public to have falth in their representation or their work?

Favors Abolishing Lobby.

I therefore favor abolishing the lohhy, the notorious "third house: and if necessary to correct its evil influence, I would have restored to the people the power of direct legisiation when the people saw proper to exercise it, and teh power to recall faithieas officials who will not or can not or do not discharge their public dutiea. In this way would the people be more nearly represented in the making as well as in the execution of their laws. in case of a mob, let the power of recall he further secured hy placing in the governor the power to remove summarily, and until his case could be tried by the senate, or other proper judicial tribunal, any peace efficer in whose jurisdiction a mob did damage to person or property. All this looks to preventing the moh, which I maintain is better for seclety than to have a moh, and then punish it ever so severely.

In our government the law mass be both supreme and sufficient. Its enforcement must be impartial, speedy and just. The people must learn not only to submit to it, but to respect it-respect it not only as the supreme power, but as the sufficient means for the redress of all wrongs, public and private. Remove, therefore, the taint of suspicion and doubt born of corrupting influences that dominate the enactment of law and the selection of public officiale. Let the laws fairly reflact the same soher public will, and let their execution be prompt and impartial, and there will be neither ground for such violent disturbances as we are discussing, nor will thay likely occur.

A slimple, effective means of polyening is to fill a good-sized bottle with a 2 per cent solution of formalla the common germielde. Place a saucer over it and invert the whole.

A nick is broken in the mouth of the bottle, or it may be set up on a but of chip, so that the liquid will partially fill the saucer and a small allos of bread, covered with augur is placed in one side as an added attraction. Both bottle and surces may be mounted in a wooden or wire bracket so that It may be hung in any sunny corner about the stable or porch; or, with a little shelf tacked in place, the bottle may be sifupleaned up in a corner. During bot, dry weather, with no other water mear, this device will cover the back porch or etable door black with fibs. It is quite possible some such poisoning method, worked out-of-doors, would prove the chempest and custost wav of dealing with the whole fir problem lution and doles it down as needed, so that, once set, it requires no attention for months.

The garbage can trap is very simph. A hole is cut in the cover of the can just the right size for one of the familiar wire traps to fit over. A special rustless trap for this purpose is now being made. The fly is attracted from a great distance by the odor. It can not get into the can but invariably walks into the trup. By count'l once caught 2500 files in fifty-five minutes in such a trap at the rear of a grocery store. -New Orleans Picayune.

filled with anxiety, for these intuition told them that they would need heat to keep them warm through the winter.

A bird council was held, and it was decided that the birds which could fly the highest should sear into the air and see if they could find a spark of fire anywhere. The efforts of the eagle, lark and raven were in vain. The bonor was left to the little brown sparrow, who epied a spark of fire in the hollow of an old stump in the hart of a deep forrest.

The birds flocked around the stump and tried to decide who should pack the spark out. But all their efforts were in vain; to the dismay they saw the spark growing smaller and fainter. The turkey then volunteered to try to keep the tiny coal alive dy fanning it with its wings. Day after I cleanes, southes, Interest and the stand of the search of the decide wings. DRAUGHON'S PRACTICAL BUSINESS COLLEGE.

[INCORPORATED] EVANSVILLE, ADUCAH, NASHVILLE, ST. LOUIS. SPRINGFIELD, MEMPHIS

Letter from Secretary Robertson We note from the public press that the Kenticky millers have held a mosting and fixed the price of wheat at 75 cents for No. 2 and from that downward. Now farmers of Kentucky, you who have labored under the blue Dome of Heaven and produced this wheat that will soon go on the market to sustain life to the great army of people in all walks of life, are you satisfied that the price fixed by the millers is an equitable price, and can you afford to toil as you have tolled and then sell your wheat at this low price? Do you think you will be treating your wife and children right the your soil your wheat at a price that is below the cost of production? Or will the farmers go on and deliver the wheat at the price fixed by the millers and then so soon as the floor is ready for the market and the consumer will you all meet in a great convention and fix the price n othe flour? Well this would be only in keeping with what the miliers have done, and we are not blaming the millers for doing what they have in flxing the price on your wheat if you submit to it, but we just mention these things to call your attention to the inconsistency that the farmer practices; first let us talk just a little. Last fall you broke your ground with a plow on which the manufacturer fixed the price, then you used your harrow on which the price was made by the one who made or produced lt then what about the drill and fertilizers you brought Into play in the production of this wheat on which the miller has recently fixed the price? and you remember that the binder with which you harvested your crop? if I am not mistaken, the price was made by the International Harvester Co. Yes you will say this is all very true, and this is not all; your good wife will have to be into the kitchen on the day you have that wheat threshed and with the temperature up to about one hundred will get a meal every particle of which will be prepared in vesseds on which the price has been flx-d by the ones who made the vessels and you will just sit down and feel that you are oertainly favored because you bave been refleved of fixing the price, just to think you produce the wheat and then you will just impose on the responsibility of pricing, grading and welghing and you have nothing to do but to walt at the place of de-Ivery till your turn comes and then just unload. Farmers of this free America you should awaken to the great r-sponsibilities that are thrusting thomselves on you to day, and take your places among the other great industries of the country and fix the prices on your product just as every other budiess is doing. It is right and we believe a sacred duty we owe to the great profession of iness world. S. B. ROBERTSON, State Sect'y. A. S. of E. Galhoun, Ky.

Four-Fifths of Your Store Patrons Were Won by Advertising---And Four-Fifths of These Would Be Lost if You Stopped Advertising!

Newspaper advertising is a part of all worth-while storeservice—a part of it which patrons particularly value, For it keeps them in touch with your store-events, your sales, the arrival of new stocks, the showing of novelties, the buying opportunities which your store must create for its friends.

The advertising becomes the link between the store and its clientele. They expect the store's advertising to SERVE THEM-"not now and then," not partially; but ALWAYS, and fully! To curtail the advertising-in volume or frequency-would make the same impression on them as though you moved into smaller quarters and cut down your force of clerks and workers. To INCREASE your advertising to make it more complete as "store News," as a "market letter." as a bulletin of bargains—will have the effect of enlisting a lot of new store-friends every day, and of winning anew ail of the old onesi

Thieves Hide Loot in Pulpit and Get Away.

Mystery of Several Years Partially Cleared With Discovery.

Simpsonville, Ky., July 5 .- A partial solution of the mystery surrounding the robbery of the general store of T. M. Lyons & Co., of this place, on July 30, 1908, came to light this morning when a portion of the stolen goods, consisting of food and clothing, together with burgiar tools, were found concealed in the pulpit of the Simpsonville Colored Baptist ehurch, which is boing remodeled and painted.

The stolen property was evidently deposited in the pulpit by the thleves for safe ke ping, nearly thirteen years ago, was found by the worknion when they displaced the pulpit from the rostrum. The fact that a slip of paper, containing a complete list of the articles found in the unusual hiding place led to the belief Subjection of the lesser to the of the authorities that the list was left with the goods to gnarantee "honor among thleves," to insure an equal division of the booty at any time that they should be able to remove it. The loot has been returned to the rightful owners.

On the night of July 30, 4898 thieves sawed out a panel of the rear door in the store of T. M. Lyons & Co. stock to the value of $150 was taken. The combination of the safe was successfully worked. but nothing was obtained from the fron box as the money had been removed by the proprletor when he quit busin as for the day.

Three strangers, white men, were seen prowling about the town on the day before the robbery, and were missing the following morning when the theft was discovered. No trace of them has since been found. It is believed that they found that they would be unable to make the all the foot they took from the store and placed a portion of it in the pulpit of the Colored Baptist Church, inending to return for it later. The aet that three suspicions characters were seen the day before was published in the newspaper with a report of the robbery. Fear of apprehension probably prevented the bugglars from returning. To place the clothing and groceries in the pulpit box it was necessary for them to remove the top on which and the pulpit tampered with had lever been detected. The discovery of the goods attract d a good deal of ittention, a crowd gathered at the scene to witness the removal.

iNTENTIONS, Ever judge of men by their professions, for, though the bright moment of promising is but a moment and cannot be prolonged, yet if sincere in its moment's extravagant goodness, why, trust It and know the man by it, I say, not by his performance, which is half the world's work, interfere as the world needs must with its accidents and circumstances. The profession was purely the man's own. I judge people by what they might be, not are nor will be.-Robert Browning.

Saving Waste Vegetables.

On most farms there is enough of small and unsatable vegetables that go to waste each fail to carry a good sized flock of poultry through the essential part of their ration, green nasaleable and the other small root crops; sather and store than away in its out of doors to food during the early days of winter at the time when the poultry andly misthe green food. In proparing the vegstables for the table during the win ber save the refuse portion for the fowl instead of sending it to swine; true, hogs thrive on sort of stuff, but it will pay a larger profit if fed to the poultry. The increased value of the stock and its return in milk, weight or eggs make the feding profitable.
